PLANNING IN THE WEST

June 17 & 18, 2009

Stueckle Sky Center at Boise State University

Our urban and rural lands are intertwining, our towns are transitioning into cities, and how the New West matures is at the forefront of our minds. NewWest.Net and Boise State University present Planning in the West— a regional conference/conversation about innovations in planning and the challenges involved in helping our region grow in the most positive possible ways.

Wednesday, June 17 – Pre-conference tours focus on art and architecture in streetscapes, mixed use and infill, as well as renewable energy projects in Boise. The day concludes with a conference opening reception and social.

Thursday, June 18 – A full day of presentations, panel discussions and networking opportunities at the Stueckle Sky Center on campus at Boise State University. Highlights include keynote speakers Chris Duerksen, AICP, from Clarion Associates on sustainable community development codes for the West; and Dr. Arthur C. Nelson, FAICP, Director of Metropolitan Research from the University of Utah, with a new perspective and original research on planning and growth trends in the Snake River Corridor and how to position your firm for a prosperous future.

Plan to spend the day learning from discussions and presentations by regional professionals on innovative land design, community development projects, new models for city/county sustainability codes and planning with a green mind.
